Entertain * Engage * Enjoy * Experience
My parents were both artists. Supplies for drawing, painting, sewing and ceramics were abundant and good quality. Art came first in the family. Making art made me happy – most of the time. At age 14, I studied painting and drawing Esquela Esmeralda de Artes Plasticas in Mexico City for one year.

It made perfect sense to me to drop out of school in grade 12 to join a very small “worker-controlled” company where I learned welding and fabricating. In the last couple of decades while working in the shipyards, I returned to painting to find a way home to parts of myself that felt neglected.

Current works explore industry, women’s presence in industry and landscapes. Political questions about belonging and place underlie this work. I am intrigued by the beauty of moments; the extraordinary in the ordinary.
